A new Covid variant is spreading rapidly and experts say the strain is 'just getting started'. The variant, known as XEC, was first detected in Germany and is now spreading across Europe.

Health experts in the USA predict it will rapidly become the dominant strain. Dr Eric Topol, director of the Scripps Research Translational Institute in California told the Los Angeles Times XEC 'is just getting started now around the world and here'.

She said: "We'll really have to watch – because the overall information on it is not super robust now – but I would imagine over the next couple of weeks, particularly if it starts to creep up higher and higher, we will be hearing a little bit more about it."

The virus has been found in 15 countries across three continents after first appearing in Berlin in June. Melbourne data expert Mike Honey has analysed the rapid spread of the strain and said it is 'a likely next challenger to the currently dominant variants'.

• feeling tired or exhausted

- an aching body
- a headache
- a sore throat
- a blocked or runny nose
- loss of appetite
- diarrhoea
- feeling sick or being sick

The symptoms are very similar to symptoms of other illnesses, such as colds and flu. Most people feel better within a few weeks, but it can take longer to recover. For some people, it can be a more serious illness and their symptoms can last longer.
